IAPSIT

The world sugar market has become increasingly complex and competitive with the imposition of WTO regulations and formation of several economic blocks.

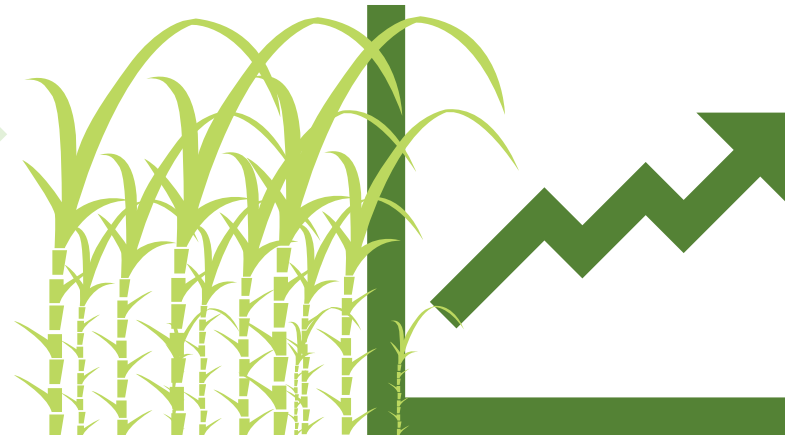

These have affected sugar production, consumption and trade with inevitable consequences for the sugar industry in developing countries which are already plagued with low efficiency and a high cost of production.

IAPSIT is a non-profit scientific association of sugar crop scientists, technologists, managers, institutions and companies concerned with the holistic improvement of the sugar industry and integrated industries in the developing countries.

IAPSIT has been helping on building a sustainable sugar industry in developing countries which contributes over 70% of global sugar where the production system needs to be re-engineered to obtain maximum efficiency.
